Early Years and Studying

He began his musical studies at the age of four under the guidance of his grandfather, Cristobal Marin, a professional clarinetist and student of Miguel Yuste. At seventeen he moved to Los Angeles to study at the University of Southern California, studying for five years with Yehuda Gilad and Michele Zukovsky. During this period he served as principal clarinet in several youth orchestras, was a member of the Los Angeles Wind Quintet, and won competitions such as the Buffet North America Clarinet Competition (Chicago, 1995), the Pasadena Instrumental Competition (California, 1995), and the Jennings Butterfield Young Artists Competition (Tucson, 1994). He attended the Tanglewood Music Center for two consecutive summers, the academy of the Boston Symphony Orchestra, working with conductors such as Seiji Ozawa and Simon Rattle and performing with the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Career in the United States

After completing his studies in Los Angeles, he worked with orchestras such as the Pittsburgh Symphony, Cincinnati Symphony, and Naples Philharmonic, appearing in venues including Carnegie Hall, Heinz Hall, Royce Hall, and Music Hall.

Solo Performances

He has appeared as a soloist performing concertos by Weber, Copland, Mozart, Nielsen, and Debussy, among others, both in the United States and Spain.

Teaching

Teaching occupies a central place in his career. Between 1998 and 1999 he served as clarinet professor at Florida Gulf Coast University in Fort Myers (Florida), where he taught at the university level. He has given masterclasses in several countries, was assistant to Yehuda Gilad, and since 2017 has shared educational content on a bilingual YouTube channel. He works individually with students through Zoom and PlayWithAPro, adapting to each person's needs.

In recent years he has developed an approach in which the technical and the human meet, drawing on concepts from quantum physics and research from the HeartMath Institute as an inspiring framework to explore the relationship between inner state and performance. He offers lectures and dialogue-based sessions for students, teachers, educators, and companies. With young people he uses a visual and participatory format; with adults, a dialogue-centered approach.

Topics he addresses include non-judgment, ego, stage fright, performance under pressure, deep listening, and tools applicable to everyday life.

Artistic Accompaniment

He works with musicians and performers who seek clarity, depth, and coherence in their interpretation. His role is not that of a traditional teacher or a conventional coach: it is a refined listening, an artistic dialogue, and an external perspective capable of detecting technical and expressive nuances that sometimes go unnoticed even by experienced interpreters.

This work is rooted in the respect and sensitivity he has developed as a musician, and in his exploration of the relationship between inner state, presence, and performance. With high-level interpreters, the process becomes an exchange between equals — precise attention that helps make fundamental aspects of interpretation conscious and aligned with musical intention.

He also works on the internal dimension of the interpreter: confidence, presence, and the capacity to perform from an open and stable place rather than from tension or fear. When this occurs, technique and expression integrate naturally.

Creative Projects

He has written Vibrar Mas Alto (Vibrating Higher), a book that explores how presence and the management of one's internal state can improve the way people live, learn, and perform in their daily lives. Using music as a mirror of human experience, the book addresses educators, leaders, parents, and anyone who influences the lives of others.

He works in music editing and mastering with a highly technical and meticulous approach, refining every sonic element to achieve the highest professional standard. He has also spent years specialising in clarinet repair and mouthpiece refacing.

Current Professional Activity

Since 2007 he has been Associate Principal Clarinet of the Orquesta Sinfonica de Galicia and a member of the Grupo Instrumental Siglo XX. He is a Selmer and Vandoren artist, and performs on Selmer Privilege clarinets and a Vandoren BD5 HD mouthpiece.
